In 2019, Anna Voth was one of RCRW's scholarship winners. Below is an update from Anna Voth:

Hello Republican Women,

Thank you so much for your generous scholarship which has allowed me to grow and blossom at Abilene Christian University this year! My first year in college was a blast!

Not only did I love my classes: like New Testament Studies, Figure drawing and Media Maker, but I also got the chance to become involved in leadership and organizations on campus. I have become involved in the organization ACU for Life, which I have now become the Communications Director of. I worked with this group to plan and organize a panel composed of students and professionals to discuss the issue of abortion from both sides of the argument (unfortunately this event was not able to take place due to COVID, but we hope to pick it up next spring).

I have also enjoyed joining ACU's College Republicans each week, which has allowed me to meet political representatives from Abilene as well as stay up-to-date on political issues. I have thoroughly enjoyed being a part of the ACU Freshmen Honors Council, where I and a small group of freshmen honors students planned all honors college parties and events. One of my favorite organizations that I have had the privilege of being a part of is a program called Palm House Kids, which allows children and teenagers a safe place to enjoy fellowship and hear the gospel which contrasts the difficult upbringing and school scene many of these children are accustomed to regularly.

Having the opportunity to meet and bond with these teenagers has truly opened my eyes to blessings I take for granted as well as a hope and optimism that these teenagers share with me each week.

Your generous scholarship gave me the opportunity to not only learn and grow at this exceptional university, but also give me the opportunity to reach others in this community whether its sharing the pro-life message, or loving on underprivileged teenagers, I know that God has called me here to Abilene and I could have never realized this calling without your help. Thank you so much for all you have done for me to further my education.

Blessings,

Anna Voth

NATIONAL FEDERATION OF REPUBLICAN WOMEN

'NFRW supports President Donald J. Trump to designate Antifa as a domestic terrorist organization.'

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE: June 1, 2020

ALEXANDRIA, Va. – Ann Schockett, President of the National Federation of Republican Women (NFRW), issued a video statement today regarding the killing of George Floyd and the resulting nationwide civil unrest, and voiced support for President Donald Trump to designate Antifa as a domestic terrorist organization.

"On the heels of our entire country being severely impacted by the COVID-19 pandemic, a crisis of epic proportions from loss of loved ones to economic hardships, our nation was witness to a horrible, grave tragedy last week in Minnesota, the killing of George Floyd by a law enforcement officer. We mourn for this senseless loss. Justice will be served," Schockett said in the video statement. "Yet, instead of being able to come together at a delicate time when our nation is reopening and rebuilding, as well as mourning for the loss of George Floyd and others, we're being torn apart, purposefully and with an agenda by the far Left and the real fascists, which is Antifa, " she continued. "They are using the distress of our country to cause chaos and devastation through rioting and violence to prevent our country from coming together. Destruction at any cost is their goal. And joining them in mob mentality, setting our country ablaze, are more agitators and criminals."

Schockett voiced the NFRW's support of President Donald J. Trump to designate Antifa as a domestic terrorist organization.

NFRW provides a forum for women to serve as leaders in the political, government, and civic arenas. NFRW objectives are to recruit, train and elect Republican candidates, promote the principles of the Republican Party, educate the public and protect the integrity of our electoral process.

TEXAS FEDERATION of Republican Women

As we continue to search for what our new “normal” will be post COVID-19 pandemic, it is clear that the pandemic response has taken its toll on our individual rights and freedoms. One of our dearest rights is the right to vote in free and fair elections. While we have been “stay[ing] at home, work[ing] safe,” the Texas Democrat Party, League of Women Voters, MOVE Texas and others (TDP Plaintiffs) have filed numerous lawsuits in selected Texas state and federal courts seeking to expand the definition of who can request an absentee ballot in the upcoming election. Although this litigation is playing out in our court system, at its core is the interpretation of Texas state legislation.

Approximately 30 states across the country allow voters to vote by mail for any reason. However, Texas has long maintained a limited definition of who can apply for an absentee ballot. Chapter 82 of the Texas Election Code provides that to be eligible to vote by mail (absentee) in Texas, you must (1) be 65 years or older; (2) be disabled; (3) be out of the county on election day and during the period for early voting by personal appearance; or (4) be confined in jail, but otherwise eligible. The specific provision at issue is section 82.002(a) which defines what constitutes a “disability” and provides “[a] qualified voter is eligible for early voting by mail if the voter has a sickness or physical condition that prevents the voter from appearing at the polling place on election day without a likelihood of needing personal assistance or of injuring the voter’s health.”

The TDP Plaintiffs and numerous county clerks around the state (i.e., Harris, Dallas, Travis, El Paso, and Cameron counties) argue that any registered voter’s lack of immunity to COVID-19 is a physical condition that qualifies as a disability for purposes of obtaining an absentee ballot. They have asked the courts to interpret the statute in this manner, and thus far, the lower state and federal district courts have done so.

During the May 20 oral argument in the Supreme Court of Texas that was broadcast on the court’s YouTube channel, the TDP Plaintiffs’ counsel revealed that the TDP Plaintiffs desired to inform voters via websites, mail, and phone that they could apply for an absentee ballot if they lacked immunity to COVID-19. Counsel conceded that the county clerks had a constitutional obligation to follow the law in the state of Texas and presumably would do so. The State (represented by the Attorney General’s office) argues that interpreting the definition of disability as the TDP Plaintiffs put forward would mean that almost every Texas citizen who is registered to vote could request an absentee ballot. Moreover, if “lack of immunity” is interpreted to mean a “physical condition,” then the “lack of immunity” won’t be limited to just COVID-19: it could include lack of immunity to the flu or a whole host of diseases. Such an interpretation would essentially allow the exception (disability) to swallow the rule that you have to appear in person to vote. During the Supreme Court oral argument, the State conceded that county clerks are not required to go beyond what is represented on the face of the application for an absentee ballot, and therefore, if an otherwise qualified voter checks that they have a “disability” then an absentee ballot would be provided.

This litigation clearly shows that this is a thorny issue. Ultimately, it appears that the courts will decide who is eligible for an absentee ballot in the upcoming runoff and general elections. However, this issue is likely to come up in the next legislative session. It is important for us to fully vet this issue and communicate to our state representatives our opinions on whether Texas should expand its definition of who is entitled to vote by mail or better define who is entitled to vote by mail to maintain the limited scope of absentee voting. We will continue to follow the litigation and update you in coming editions.
